JUDGING

PROCESS

This year we decided to go big and invited seven judges to participate! We enjoy having different perspectives and talents when it comes to judges, so some judges may have an artistic background, while others do not. Getting different viewpoints from those with different backgrounds gives our judges a unique perspective and approach to our students' artwork.

“Hoppin’ to the Tune”

After four years of art shows and so many paintings, I wanted to return to my childhood love - stop motion! Beginning in middle school, I used to spend hours repeating the tedious process of moving things slightly and taking a picture, to then place it back and watch it come to life. This was by far my most advanced project yet, taking about thirty hours in total from research to final edits. This was also my first project syncing audio, making it look like the frog was really the one singing. I had lofty goals, and I praise God He helped me to create what I envisioned. At times it would take an entire hour to create one second of film, and somehow the project never stopped being exciting.
